

Matzenauer Scores Again as Kundry

The German Contralto, Singing the Part for the First Time, Makes the New Year's Matinee Performance of "Parsifal" Most Impressive.

BY SYLVESTER RAWLING.

"PARSIFAL" for a New Year's matinee yesterday at the Metropolitan Opera House, served to introduce, for the first time anywhere, Margarete Matzenauer as Kundry. She took the place, at short notice, of Miss Fremstedt, who is ill. Her impersonation was most noteworthy. Nothing that the German contralto has done before—and everything that she has done here—has been so distinctive, stamped her with such genius. Only that, in the first act, when she came flying through the air with a balms for the relief of Amfortas, she was too clean and her clothes were not sufficiently disheveled, she was nearly perfect.

The writer can recall nothing so effective as her singing when she was summoned by Klingsor, and in the scene of the temptation of Parsifal she was irresistible. Added to her personal beauty and the seductiveness of her voice, there seemed to project from her a prefiguration of what was to follow in a spiritual sense that was almost uncanny. In the last act her subjection and abnegation were most touching.

William Hinshaw was new as Amfortas. That he was nervous, there could be no doubt. He sang flat at the beginning in a manner most distressing, but he soon pulled himself together and presented, at least, a conventionally interesting characterization.

The performance, as a whole, was remarkably effective. Rarely, if ever, has the flower scene of the second act been better done, and, surely, it has never been better sung. Carl Burian in the title part was altogether satisfactory, at least from the point of view of singing. Herbert Witherspoon made of Klingsor something human and less awesome than usual, and Gortis was a fine Klingsor. The others in the cast were excellent and Alfred Hertz conducted with his usual fervor.

TETRAZZINI SINGS LUCIA AGAIN AT THE METROPOLITAN.

Mme. Tetrazzini appeared again at the Metropolitan Opera House last night as the heroine in Donizetti's "Lucia." She had forgotten the nervousness that bothered her at her first appearance last week, and she sang with all the brilliancy and effectiveness that could be expected of her in the part in which no living singer can excel her. There was a great audience to greet her, much in the old Manhattan Opera House fashion. The famous artist, beautifully sung, was repeated as, unhappily, tradition has made possible, but Mme. Tetrazzini was permitted to finish the mad scene without any extraneous "rant." Except that Campanelli took the part of Amato as Enrico, the cast was unchanged.

WALTER DAMROSCH PRESENTS TWO NEW SONGS OF HIS OWN.

Two songs by Walter Damrosch gave distinction to the Symphony Society's concert at the Century Theatre on Sunday afternoon. One was a setting of Rudyard Kipling's "The Looking Glass," and the other was Juanita's song from Mr. Damrosch's new opera, "The Dove of Peace," the words by Wallace Irving, the soloist in each case being Christine Miller. To the Kipling poem Mr. Damrosch has sought to give a tone expression that is more imaginatively than factually, but Juanita's song is altogether lovely, and accompanied by characteristic and effective orchestration. Miss Miller sang both songs well. She has a lovely contralto voice, which she uses with skill. But most of the applause after Juanita's song was meant for the composer.

EMMA EAMES COMES BACK WITH EMILIO DE GOGORZA.

Emma Eames made her reappearance in New York, after a long absence, at the Hippodrome on Sunday night in a concert with her new husband, Emilio de Gogorza, assisted by the Russian Symphony Orchestra. She was most cordially greeted by a great audience. She has grown a bit stouter, and her voice has gained in power. It may no longer be called a "sweet" one, but it is not unattractive to record a fact it might be said that Mr. de Gogorza got the largest share of the applause.

"SIEGFRIED" FINELY DONE AT A SATURDAY MATINEE.

There was given at the Metropolitan Opera House on Saturday afternoon for the first time this season a fine performance of "Siegfried," with Carl Burian in the title part, and Johannes Gossak as Brunhilde, both in splendid voice. Putnam Griswold, appearing here for the first time as the Wanderer, confirmed the impression he has made that he is an admirable artist. He was the did the seemingly impossible thing—was better than ever. Alfred Hertz conducted masterfully.

BOY PIANIST'S AMAZING SKILL AT OPERA CONCERT.

Master Deryl Rubinstein created a furor at the Metropolitan concert Sunday night by his amazing manipulation of the piano. Only twelve years old, he interpreted Liszt's "Hungarian Fantasy" and other difficult pieces in a way that set a critical audience wild with enthusiasm.

Well known soloists in a concert of rare excellence were Riccardo Martin, Mme. Matzenauer, Anna Case and Herbert Witherspoon.

WOMAN FASTER AGAIN RELIES ON THE ANGELS.

Annie Geshella Says They Feed Her and She'll Never Take Earthly Food Again.

Miss Annie Geshella announces she is again under the care of angels, and that as the heavenly visitors will feed her she no longer in need of other food at the New Jersey State Hospital at Morris Plains.

Her last of sixty-five days last spring was the longest on record. She lost no weight and apparently was in good health. For ten days she has taken nothing now, so far as can be learned, except a few sips of water.

She was taken to the Passaic Hospital last February with a "pain in her side." She said angels fed her, and to Marie was taken to the Morris Plains institution, where for sixty-five days she touched nothing in the way of food and drink, so far as the physicians know. Her weight of ninety-one pounds did not diminish.

Since then she nibbled a cracker and took a little orange juice occasionally, but ten days ago refused to take anything, and she declares she will never again take earthly food.
